

Dear Aslan Class

I hope you all enjoyed Steve Backshall again this week. I particularly enjoyed playing the poo game! Surprisingly, I did quite well!! I am writing this just as Steve is broadcasting so I will be looking forward to seeing any work you may wish upload based on what you have seen today.

Maths:

Today, we are going to continue with looking at angles. Using the link below, look at Lesson 4 – Introduce Angles. Again there is the Flashback 4 questions for you to start with. Answer all of today's questions in your maths books.

There is the activity sheet for you to complete and the answers for you to self-mark when you are finished.

English:

For English today, I would like you to read chapter 13. I have attached the links below if you would prefer to listen to it. If you would prefer to read, chapter 13 is saved on the drive.

Once you have listened/read it, I would like you to pick a character from the chapter. This could be Maia, Beatrice, Gwendolyn, Finn, Clovis, Miss Minton or one of the crows. You may wish to draw a picture of this character or just write the name instead. Around the name/picture, I would like you to annotate all the thoughts and feelings of this character. Think about:

- What was your character doing before the trap door was opened?
- How were they feeling at this point?
- How did they get to the museum?
- How did they feel getting there?
- How did they feel just before the trap door opened?
- What thoughts were going through their minds?
- How did they feel when the trap door was opened? What was their reaction?

Tomorrow, we will be writing a diary entry from the point of view of that character. I will ask you to upload these to the drive for me to see. Hopefully today's work will allow you to delve into your chosen character's thoughts and feelings.

If you really wanted a challenge – pick two different characters and see how their thoughts and feelings change.

Hope you lovely lot are all doing OK.

Look forward to reading your comments to one another and I like the group chat 'docs' page that has been set up too. Good idea.

Miss Scott
